The Murray basin covers one third of the Australia continent across Queensland, New South Wales, Victoria and South Australia. Cruise this iconic Australian outback river highway in South Australia aboard the southern hemisphere's largest inland paddle wheeler, the PS Murray Princess

KANGAROO ISLAND

Kangaroo Island is Australia's third-largest island, following Tasmania and Melville Island off the coast of the Northern Territory. Clocking in at 4.405 square kilometres, it's 150km wide with 509km of coastline, making it about the same size as Canberra, and seven times the size of Singapore. Considering the permanent population of Kangaroo Island is only about 4400, there's still plenty of space left for the many lush national and conservation parks which take up much of the island.

Ligurian bees (or Italian bees) are one of the most interesting species found on Kangaroo Island. Though they can be found around Europe, Kangaroo Island is home to the only "genetically pure" population of Ligurian bees on the planet
